others. Let's lighten up! I love it. I can relate with all that you said about kids. It is obvious you know kids. I celebrate with you your weirdness. My 1st graders think I am weird and I tell them that is a compliment. I also celebrate your integrity. I am a renegade in that I will never comply with the status quo. I won't do things that I don't believe in. I step over the line many times and at some point may be fired for doing things I believe in. Thank You from the bottom, top, sides, & in between of my heart. Leslie

Hi Denny,

I firmly believe that the techniques you taught me years ago have been a firm foundation of my successes and the success of my students. I've been at this gig only 20 years, (teaching grades 2nd thru 4th) and am still going strong!

You're the big reason for that -- without a doubt, the best workshop I've taken to enhance my career. What more can I say, but "ARFF!"

People come and go in your life and often don't realize the impact they have.

You, sir, have made a lasting one.

Sincerely,
Kim Morelli

I am/was a Controller, each day ^{of workshop} I let go of more and more and have become happier.

Specifically - I trusted a student that ~~no~~nobody else trusted (because that's what I do) and got burned by him. Now I realize it was because of him and his background, not to hurt me.

Thank you for helping me see this because now I can hug him and say "it's good to see you" when I see him again.

Hey Denny,

I would like to THANK YOU for giving me the tools to work with what I already believed. I celebrate YOU because you are a rarity in this negative world and I find it refreshing that there are other positive people out there!!!

Enjoy your time in Yellowstone and Tetons!

If I am filled with Arft, I can deal with negative people in my life - my mom - difficult parents, etc. I want to focus on the gratitude - my girls, my dogs. It helps me deal with my grief of missing my husband! I want my girls to want to be with me but feel like they need to be with me because their dad is gone.
